Bethany Barnett

“I am the sister of a soldier.”

Barnett studied for her bachelor’s degree in English at the University of Minnesota

Every life has its defining moment, an experience that changes everything. For three Irish military veterans—John, Ger, and Kevin—that moment appears to be passed. An explosion. A vow. A chance decision. Now each must live with the fallout from his actions—forever. There is no way out, no going back.

Or is there?

Another decision. A prayer. A step of faith. Though seemingly impossible, a man can set a different course.

Anyone who’s served will recognize these stories of heartache and happiness, trouble and blessings. And here’s something more: an invitation to take the next step, encouragement to look for the next defining moment.
